

A GROWING INSTITUTION

Its Mission Is Now Understood, And Bright Is the Outlook For Miller's Actual Business College.

The importance of Miller's Actual Business College as an intermediary between employers and young persons seeking to equip themselves for business positions is daily becoming more thoroughly understood and appreciated. In this relation it is a very successful institution. The busy man who needs help, and whose time is too valuable to permit his taking a young man or young woman through the rules and principles of business, finds Miller's Actual Business College the medium through which he can get help that is competent from the start. And the same happy situation exists for the persons seeking good positions. For them Miller's Actual Business College opens the way to success. This institution has secured hundreds of good positions for its graduates and for the number of applications for help it receives almost daily from business men, it can assure employment to students as soon as they have completed courses satisfactorily.

Many years prior to the establishment of this college, there was a great shortage in the number of well trained competent bookkeepers and stenographers. The demand was always greater than the supply, despite the fact that there were always a great many bookkeepers and stenographers looking for positions—lack of thorough training was the reason for their being out of employment. But now it is different. Young men and women realize that to secure satisfactory positions they must be competent, that without proper training their chances are poor. Mr. Miller, the founder of Miller's Actual Business College, observed this condition, and with a desire to relieve the situation both for employers and persons in need of employment, he began thinking over what could be done. He solved the problem, and Miller's Actual Business College is the answer.

And from the beginning, in 1892, the College has made a good reputation for itself. There has never been room for doubt that the institution fulfilled the object of its founder. It has abundantly demonstrated the practicality and usefulness of the enterprise. The good reputation has ever been maintained. Never has the confidence of the business public been more generously reposed in the College than at this time, and there is every prospect for its continuance. There is no longer need for tedious explanations and arguments in introducing the merits of the institution—the merits are their own best argument. The parents in Akron who desire their children to have a business education ask no better recommendation for Miller's Actual Business College than the success it has enjoyed in the past. Pupils are being continually enrolled for courses in either bookkeeping or shorthand—and in many instances for both.

The College, which was started by Mr. Miller in 1892, was continued by him until the present year, in February, when complete ownership changed to the hands of Mr. E. E. Workman, whose successful management of the institution during the past three years has been attended by splendid results. Under the guidance of Mr. Workman, the College has enjoyed three of the most prosperous years of its existence. The record for the past year has been the best within the history of the institution, and the outlook for the future is full of promise. Inasmuch as Mr. Workman has been in charge of the College for three years the transfer of ownership did not even cause a tremor in the conducting of affairs. The enrollment since September in the present school year has been 180, with prospects for a large summer school.

The halls and arrangements of the College are the very best. There are large, well-lighted, and well-ventilated study and recitation rooms, as well as nicely furnished and convenient offices. First you enter the general office, from which is the private office. Next you enter the shorthand department, which is a very large, well-ventilated and well-lighted room, and leading from which is the book room. To the right of the Shorthand room, back of the offices, you will find the Typewriting department, which is separated from the other work, and is arranged especially for typewriting purposes. Back of this room and to the right of the shorthand department, is the Bookkeeping room, which has every convenience for the comfort of the students. On

RIPANS

Her head with pain
was throbbing
And her eyes were red
from sobbing,
But she took of Ripans
Tabules one or two;
It was what the doctor
ordered,
For her stomach was
disordered,
And they quickly made her feel as good as new.

There is scarcely any condition of ill-health that is not benefited by the occasional use of a R. I. P. A. N. S. Tabule, and the price for 5 cents, does not bar them from any home or justify any one in enduring ill-health that can be easily cured. For sale by druggists.

entering the Shorthand room, you will be greatly surprised at the number of young people receiving shorthand instruction alone, but after being shown into the bookkeeping room and recalling the students that were divided into the several departments Shorthand, Bookkeeping and Typewriting, all busily engaged with the work assigned them, you will at first be surprised and wonder where this army of students will secure positions after finishing their work. This wonder will be set at naught when you learn that applications for young people, trained in this line, each week, are more than it is possible to fill. This is not surprising, as Akron is one of the busiest manufacturing cities of its size in the state, and furnishes employment to a great number of young people, trained in these professions. To the people of Akron who have not given these questions any thought, it would be well for them to visit this College, some time when school is in session, and see for themselves the class of students, as well as the grade of the education secured in Miller's Actual Business College.

FELT BADLY,

Not Because of His Crime, But Because He Was Locked Up.

Toledo, O., April 1.—Daniel Rosenbecker, the 13-year-old boy who confessed to having murdered his playmate, Arthur Shanteau, Saturday evening last, will never be tried for murder, as it was learned that he is under the age of legal accountability, which is 14 years. The boy broke down today for the first time since his arrest, and he cried for some little time. He said, however, he did not feel bad because he had killed Shanteau, but because of his incarceration.

Of the Local Playhouses.

Empire Comedians Come to the Grand Wednesday Night.

The Empire comedians will be at the Grand Opera house Wednesday evening. The attraction is strongly recommended.

Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryer, authors of "The Old Homestead," will present a play new to Akron citizens on Thursday next, at the Colonial theatre. It is entitled, "Our New Minister," and treats of life at the present day in any New England village. It is in its second year of success. Mr. Thompson and Mr. Ryer's play has a pungent undercurrent of human nature to keep it going through three acts, and will make the audience think a good deal better of "human nature" before it is over.

The pure life of the country, when skillfully blended with the "upper ten" and "lower five" of the city, like New York, forms an interesting study for men and women of all classes. And the moral lesson that such a play teaches is wholesome. "Human Hearts," at the Colonial Saturday night, an established melodramatic success for several seasons, deals with these elements in a natural manner and it leaves no chance for artificial methods. Will be one of the events of the theatrical season and will no doubt draw a crowded house. Seats will be on sale Thursday.

The coming of Eugene Cowles and his galaxy of remarkable singers to the Colonial theatre, next Friday, can not be regarded as other than a most remarkable musical event. Such a coterie of vocalists headed by the "Prince of Basses," Eugene Cowles, has not been heard here in many years. The entire program will be given up to bits of various operas in which Mr. Cowles has appeared with such overwhelming success, such as "Robin Hood," "The Savoyard," "The Bride Elect," "The Fortune Teller," and "The Singing Girl." Scenes from each of these operas will be produced. Seats will be on sale Wednesday morning.

A Chattanooga Druggist's Statement.

Robert J. Miller, proprietor of the Read House Drug Store of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes: "There is more merit in Foley's Honey and Tar than in any other cough syrup. The calls for a multiply wonderfully and we sell more of it than all other cough syrups combined." J. M. Laffer, J. Lamparter & Co., A. Warner.

A SWEETLY PATHETIC SONG

"Tim" Barry Has the Theme For One.

Though it has been several years since Mr. T. E. Barry, the genial ticket agent at the Union depot, has hearkened to the Muse, the spirit of minstrelsy still lives within him, and he has, in a superlative degree, the quality which in a newspaper man would be called "a nose for news," but with him is "poet's discernment." No incident which would make a good theme for a song escapes his notice and it may be probable that another popular ditty will soon fall from his pen, the theme being taken from the incident which occurred at the Union depot, some time ago, when a young girl died there, in the arms of her mother. Mr. Barry was heard to remark that it would make a capital song, and his friends hope he will work out his ideas on this subject. Mr. Barry's success in the past, in this field, would certainly warrant another effort.

GREAT GRAFT,

But He Was Not There With the Goods.

Lancaster, Pa., April 1.—Frank H. Gibson, was given a hearing before United States Commissioner Bricker here on the charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes and in default of bail was committed to jail. Gibson advertised extensively throughout the country offering to furnish a list of names of persons who were well fixed financially and who desired to get married. He received many answers, but had no names to send. In addition it is claimed he paid for his advertisements with worthless checks. Witnesses were present from Burlington, Ia., Columbus, O., and St. Paul.
